

A Beautiful Home to Many

by Aleena Rafiyath

The place in which its beauty you can see
Through the Palo Verde's thin, green boughs,
The mounts raised like the waves of the sea.

This desert is also a home, though.

Home to the white-winged doves that sing,
And the- OUCH! The scorpion that can sting,

The great horned owl that hunts at night,

The rattlesnake that bites, it might,

And the coati that searches for a grub,

Shaping the idea for the Kids Club.

Homeland to creatures both big and small,

Each with a different role and call,

For these different things make up the nature

Of this wonderful Sonoran Desert picture.

The fact that this also is your home, be fond
So, the wild of this desert and you form a bond.
